

seating

Zeus

In Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew, Bianca was a supporting part. Here, she's the star of the show. And why not? She's tough, with a frame of sandblasted stainless steel. Pretty, too: Her seat comes in acrylic resin in opaque blue, black, or red, or opaline white.

Her measurements are 16 by 17 by 32 inches. 206-499-8280; zeusnoto.com. circle 397

is in rey touch
changes
s other
ds 17½
le 400

Moroso

The Wavy chair undulates and ripples, but still proves comfortable. Plastic is injected into a complex mold, to create the seat, which is placed over a metal frame. It's lightweight, bendable, yet sturdy, and offered in red, clear, white, and blue. 800-705-6863; morosousa.com. circle 398

RIOLA

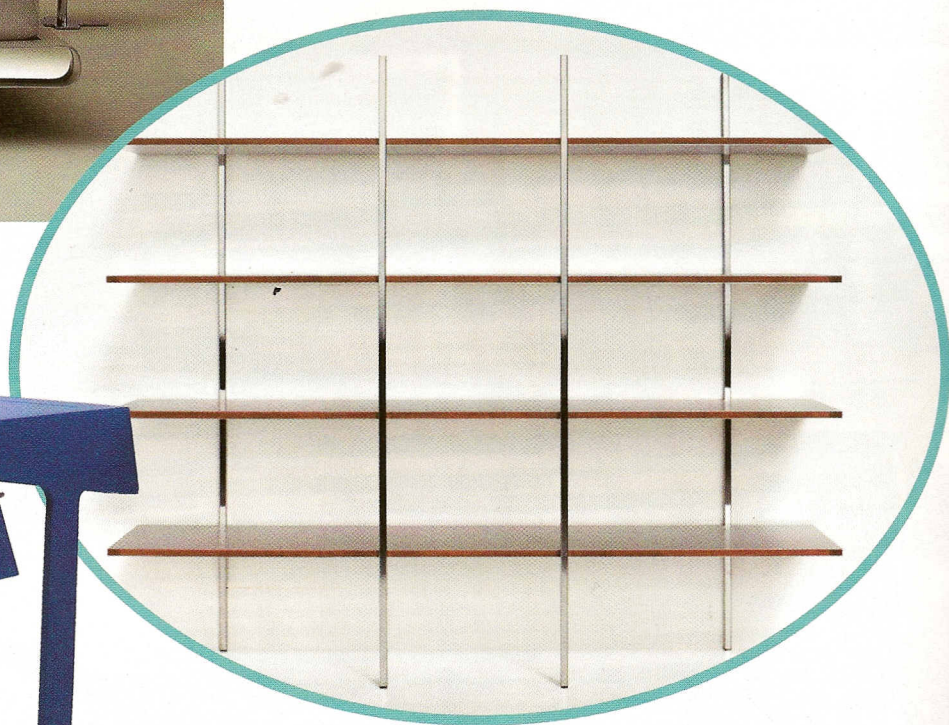

furniture

ed platform and headboard are
And it hovers off the ground
the bed and its matching end

Zeus

The Dama bookshelf is so slim it nearly dissolves into thin air. Yet with two chromed, square supports in back, and two in front, it adds depth to any wall. Its four shelves are of aluminum laminate with a silver anodized finish. 206-499-8280; zeusnoto.com. circle 580

Interluebke

Weiner Aisslinger's Cube modular cabinet system offers singular, orthogonal forms, and unlimited functions. Designed for home or office—entertaining, lowboards, sideboards, media centers, and wall units—the system includes a desk available in lacquer and wood veneer finishes. All boast Aisslinger's renowned precision styling. 385-535-0704; interluebke.com. circle 581 ➤